

Kangaroo Glyn jumps at chance to box Gough

He's an animal in the ring: Boxing promoter Glyn Rhodes gets to grips with Darren Gough

IF you do not want to know the answer turn away now ...

Right, so why was Darren Gough at a Sheffield boxing gym and sparring a bloke in a 7ft kangaroo costume?

Telly.

More precisely, BBC Question of Sport cameras. They filmed Gough at Sheffield Boxing Centre on Burton Street for the mystery guest round of their quiz.

All sorts of shots were taken

TV SPORT

of the Yorkshire and England fast bowler, excluding a full face picture.

It is then down to the studio guest celebs to identify the sportsman in some future programme.

Glyn Rhodes, who runs Sheffield Boxing Centre, thought he was just lending out the gym for filming.

It didn't end there. He was soon persuaded to spar, skip and shadow box as Gough's body double for more footage.

Then came the real punchline, Rhodes donned the kangaroo gear and squared up to Gough in the ring for a bit of a knockabout end to the feature.

One pretend blow and it was all over.

Who threw the punch? Who threw the fight?
